The first discographies were lists of titles of recordings, many of which were not even musical recordings, and the first efforts at recording music were not limited to records but included such other media as cylinders and piano rolls. Foreword

As long as we need records for something more than background music we will need discographies. The proliferation of recorded sound is so great that only a devoted researcher of a composer's music on records, an artist's performing career on records, or a record company's rise and fall from the first number to the last on its list can enable us to use fully the riches that are hidden within grooves.

As long as we need discographies we will need the kind of bibliography that Michael Gray and Gerald Gibson have given us. Discographies are appearing constantly as monographs, in books, and in periodicals of such diverse origin that one wonders if any library has all of them. If one cannot find a discography, or does not know that it exists, it is useless.

This bibliography can do several things. Obviously, its first purpose is in helping to find a particular discography. It can also help a discographer to find what has already been compiled on his or her chosen subject; anyone who is going over previously plowed ground can at least improve upon preceding efforts. A word of caution: not every item that calls itself a discography includes even the most basic elements of information invariably needed by a reader. Most discographers learn by experience, profit from the insights of others in the field, and grow increasingly humble about their earliest efforts. But there is no way to keep anyone from calling any casually assembled list of a few records by this title. Before assuming that a discography listed here is adequate, evaluate it. If it falls short, see if you can do better. Finally, it is useful to note the subjects not listed in this book; discographers are hereby advised that open season is declared on all areas thus far neglected.

Gray and Gibson have tried to improve on the efforts of their predecessors in the field. Carl Bruun and John Gray are the acknowledged pioneers; in fact Mr. Bruun had recently compiled a supplement to his earlier work, which is now superseded by this bibliography. Both Lewis Foreman and David Cooper have more recently approached the subject on a broad basis. It is no denigration of their significant efforts to say that all of these works are now supplanted by this new series, which when completed will cover the entire field of discography. The compilers began from the vantage point of their adjacent desks in the Descriptive Cataloging Division of the Library of Congress, where they were in an ideal position to be aware of the great bulk of discographic material they were trying to organize, and more important to examine it firsthand. Although Michael Gray is now Music Librarian at the Voice of America and Gerald Gibson is presently Assistant Head of the Recorded Sound Section at the Library of Congress, they have not lost touch with the flow of print. Their own grasp of classical music will be complemented by collaborators in the other special fields to be covered in the succeeding volumes.

What makes the future look bright is that the compilers will continue the annual bibliography of discographies in the Journal of the Association for Recorded Sound Collections, where the work in progress has been appearing since 1974. In fact it will continue to be work in progress for some areas until all five volumes have been published, at which point the publisher will issue a supplement to the series.

Preface

This first volume of Bibliography of Discographies, encompassing discographies of classical music published between 1925 and 1975, begins a series of works that will eventually number five volumes devoted to discographies in all subject areas. When completed these will survey jazz (Volume 2); popular music (Volume 3); ethnic and folk music (Volume 4); and general discographies of music, as well as label lists, speech, and animal sounds (Volume 5).

In compiling this bibliography we have recognized the work of previous authors in the field—Carl Bruun and John Gray, whose pioneering bibliography was published in Recorded Sound in 1962—and more recent efforts by Lewis Foreman and David Cooper. We have also recognized the continuing need for a comprehensive, authoritative guide to discographies, and it is this aim that inspires our work.

We have not attempted to provide a definition of “discography,” in spite of the efforts of many others to do so. Instead, our selection of citations has been guided primarily by the self-designation of a work and by its potential usefulness to the user. We hope, however, that users in search of definitions will gain some enlightenment from what we have compiled.

RESEARCH METHOD

In gathering citations we have relied almost exclusively on examination of the discographies themselves. Those not seen by us but taken from various secondary sources have been enclosed in double brackets [[]]. Citations of monographs are taken as closely as possible from the title page, with interpolations or other alterations enclosed in single brackets. Because of this method some citations will differ in form from those found in other bibliographies and reference sources. A number of secondary citations which could not be clarified in the time allotted to our research have been omitted and will appear after examination in a supplementary edition of this bibliography. General discographies of music, such as buyer's guides, collector's guides, and label discographies, will appear in Volume 5 of this series.

As part of the examination process we have adopted a seven-number annotative code which is used to identify elements that we believe to be important to users. These coded elements appear in double parentheses "(())" included in or following the citation. The symbol "((-))" is used to signify that no coded elements appear in the discography. The elements and their symbols are:

- 1 Noncommercial recordings
- 2 Not used in this volume
- 3 Matrix numbers
- 4 Index
- 5 Release dates
- 6 Take numbers
- 7 Place and/or date of recording

ORGANIZATION

We have divided the bibliography into two sections: the body, which contains personal names and other subjects arranged in a single-numbered alphabetical sequence; and the index, encompassing names of compilers, authors, editors, series titles, and distinctive discography titles. Surnames of compilers, authors, and editors in the body have been capitalized to facilitate identification and to make scanning entries easier. Filing of multiple listings under a given heading is by either name of the compiler of the discography, the name of the author of the work in which the discography appears, or the title of the discography. Headings for citations that are not personal names are as specific as the entry allows. For composers and their works entries have been arranged in the following manner: general discographies of the composer followed by discographies of types of works or specific works (e.g., symphonies or operas).

BEETHOVEN, LUDWIG VAN, 1770-1827

- 223 Phonograph records in BURK, John N.:
The life and works of Beethoven. New York: Random House, [1943]: 464-478

- 279 HASELAUER, Elisabeth: Diskographie
in Hi Fi Stereophonie (February 1971):
114 ((5))

Discographies for performers appear in the following forms:

CARUSO, ENRICO, 1873-1921

(Journal article) → 573 DRUMMOND, H. J.: Enrico Caruso; a chronological list of his records in Gramophone, No. 128 (January 1934): 311-314 ((7))

(Title entry) → 574 Enrico Caruso. [Copenhagen]: Nationalmuseet, 1961. 22 leaves (Det National Diskotek Katalog; 2) ((3, 4, 6, 7))

(Monograph) → 576 FAVIA-ARTSAY, Aida: Caruso on records. [1st ed.] Valhalla, NY: Historic Record, [1965]: 218 pp. ((3, 4, 7))

Form of personal names and subjects in the body is based on the authority lists of the Library of Congress; where appropriate, cross-references linking variant subjects or name forms to those used have been made. Filing in the body and in the index follows American Library Association filing rules.

Because no work of bibliography can ever be complete we invite readers to submit their additions or corrections to the compilers in care of the publisher. In making this request we also acknowledge the help and assistance provided to us by these persons and institutions: Fred Bindman, Head, and the staff of the Music Section, Descriptive Cataloging Division, Library of Congress; James R. Smart, Reference Librarian, Recorded Sound Section, Library of Congress; the staff of the British Institute of Recorded Sound, London; Steve Smolian; Richard Warren, Yale University; David Hall and Gary Gisondi, New York Public Library; J. F. Weber, Utica, New York; John Wiser; Bill McGuire, Washington, D.C.; Bill Curtis, Boston; and Dr. Robert Werba, Vienna.
